For those recently diagnosed with Alzheimer's disease

By John Smith

When I was first diagnosed with Alzheimer's disease, I was terrified. I didn't know what the future held, and I was worried about how my family would cope. But my husband, John, was there for me every step of the way. He was my rock, my support, my everything.

John took care of me with such love and compassion. He never complained, even when I was at my worst. He always made sure that I was comfortable and that I had everything I needed.

John's love for me never wavered, even as my memory faded. He would always tell me how much he loved me, and he would always hold my hand. He made me feel safe and loved, even when I didn't know who I was.

John's caregiving was a gift to me. It allowed me to live with dignity and grace, even as my disease progressed. I am so grateful for his love and support.

John's story is a testament to the power of love. It shows that even in the darkest of times, love can conquer all.

About the Author

John Smith is a retired school teacher. He has been married to his wife, Mary, for over 50 years. Mary was diagnosed with Alzheimer's disease in 2010. John has been her primary caregiver ever since.

John is a passionate advocate for Alzheimer's awareness and support. He speaks regularly to groups about his experience as a caregiver. He is also the author of the blog, "An Alzheimer's Angel."
